Higher security levels than other inmates.

38.6% of federal male inmates identifying as “trans” are at “High” security level[9] compared to 12.8% of general population of federal inmates.[10]

Even if none of this were true… males don’t belong in women’s prison.

Women are entitled to the safety, privacy and dignity of single sex spaces even – and arguably especially – in prison and jail.

How did this happen?

Federal regulation[1] and individual state laws[2] and policies[3] allow male prisoners to be housed in women's prisons on the basis of "gender identity."

Most are attracted to women.

Over 60% of males identifying as "trans" say they are sexually attracted to women.[4]

Most have a penis.

Fewer than 15% of males identifying as "trans" have undergone genital surgery.[5]

Criminal violence more like men's than women's.

A long-term study found those "trans" identifying males who had undergone "sex reassignment" surgery still "retained a male pattern regarding criminality."[6]

Higher "sex offense" rate than other men.

48% of federal male inmates identifying as "trans" are in for a "sex offense"[7] compared to 11.6% of the general federal prison population.[8]
